

fire investigation services

EFI Global provides forensic investigation services to help customers determine the origin and cause of fires and explosions. With the largest team of fire investigation experts in the industry, we are able to provide clients with the highest technical and scientific services available.

EFI Global's fire investigation services cover the complete range of losses, from large commercial and residential structures and marine losses to equipment and automotive fires. We have over 250 experts dedicated to determining the origin and cause of these events.

When a fire or explosion occurs, we are able to provide comprehensive services for customers including:

- Origin and cause investigations
- Site analysis
- Product failure analysis
- Arson investigations
- Vehicle fire investigations
- Evidence collection, storage, preservation
- Flammability analysis, testing
- Event documentation, simulation

In addition, our team of forensic engineering experts is also available to assist with the investigation of complex losses.

Arson investigations are among the key services we specialize in. Our experienced investigators know what to look for and can identify red flags at both the desk level and on scene.

We have fire investigators from coast to coast, and many of our experts have worked on international assignments. With this coverage, we are able to ensure a timely response to any event, anytime, anywhere.
