

Forensic advisory services

To ensure claims are accurately quantified and resolved, many complex financial components must be analyzed. Our forensic advisory team provides the skills and expertise to help clients achieve the best results when resolving claims and disputes.

Experience and expertise

We provide forensic accounting and other claim-related services for carriers, adjusters, attorneys and others. Our accountants have in-depth experience in the following financial areas:

- Measurement of economic damages
- Appropriate calculations of co-insurance, waiting period deductibles and other conditions
- Elimination of duplicate payments
- Determination of alternative means to measure losses when traditional documentation is unavailable
- Measurement of losses that cannot be physically observed
- Working with insureds to mitigate time element losses

The breadth of our services encompasses every major industry segment and claim type. Our expert team investigates various types of claims and specializes in key areas including:

- Builder's risk
- Data analytics
- Employee dishonesty
- Extra expense calculation
- Inventory analysis
- Loss of income calculation
- Loss of rent
- Scheduling property damage
- Theft
- Time element analysis

Specialized capabilities

When businesses are dealing with losses due to an event like the COVID-19 outbreak, the impact must be measured locally, as various regions and industries are affected differently. Our team is able to isolate the impact at the business level from the overall wide-spread virus impact and objectively measure the losses occurring independently of the virus. We can also apply the appropriate statistical analyses to measure the COVID-19 impact in instances where the virus is covered by the policy. Using data analytics and technology, our team can rapidly respond to increased claim volumes as needed.

The Sedgwick difference

We combine the personal touch of a small firm with the resources and reach of a global company. Our goal is to accurately measure the financial impact of an event on your business, while providing consistent, high-quality service.
